

Addressing the quality of death

Addressing the quality of death

By Dan Bammes

One of the facets of quality of life for cancer patients is addressing the quality of death. As Beth Morgan has said, "I am less afraid of dying than of what it takes to get there." Eventually, we all have to make that reckoning. Myeloma patient Dan Bammes writes about two members of his family whose approaches to death were very different.

Click here to read the article